IRIS is seeking success stories for this year's Summit from the host community of Waterville as well as those from the greater NCW region including Okanogan, Douglas, Chelan, and northern Grant counties that illustrate these themes:

- How are we increasing the health & connectivity of our lands and waters, i.e., how are programs that incorporate art, recreation, and locally-produced food contributing to this connectivity?
- What are we doing to reduce waste, increase recycling, and foster healthy businesses that create jobs and increase access to locally-produced goods?
- How are we using cross-generational relationships to foster a sense of belonging, improve our health, engage students as lifelong learners, and grow opportunities for jobs?
- How are we using art, technology, and “third places” or meeting spaces (e.g., coffee shops, farmer's markets, community centers) to bridge cultural & political divides and strengthen our communities?
- How are our communities coming together to develop a unified vision and take steps needed to turn that vision into action?

Please fill out the template on the back and email to: irisncw@gmail.com or bring your story and 10 copies to the Summit on November 12 in Waterville. Register at www.irisncw.org
